
A Plan for Home Construction and Remodeling Services

The Gridley Company's process to provide outstanding home construction and remodeling services for our clients takes place in four basic stages:

- Initial consultation. Gridley designers get together with you for a conversation about your vision for a new home, addition, or renovation. This step also involves discussing materials, budget, a schedule and what you can expect for the next several weeks or months when you trust the Gridley Company to be your builder.
- Pre-construction. We visit the construction site for measurements and agree on the design and cost of your project and order materials that will be used. Once permits and plans are approved and a contract signed, demolition begins and the site is prepared for construction.
- Project construction. Gridley tradespeople work to renovate or build your home. Whether or not you are on-site, a project manager communicates with you each day, going over what has been accomplished and answering your questions. Because everyone assigned to your project is a Gridley employee, not a sub-contractor, our close-knit team is able to work efficiently to meet deadlines.
- Post-construction. Gridley is with you even after your project is completed to your satisfaction. In the months afterward, we'll be available for any questions or concerns in the remote chance any warranty work is needed.

The Gridley Company's home building process is geared to take the anxiety out of home construction and remodeling services. Now is the time to build a home, remodel a kitchen, or renovate a bathroom. Call us today at 408-374-0900.
