
New Home Construction

Building a semi-custom or custom new home can be one of the most exciting projects that life has to offer. Gridley Company, serving the Campbell and San Jose, California area, has the design - build home building experience to help you understand the phases of new home design and construction. The Gridley team is ready to help you think through many of the decision points of home design to help you craft a new home best-suited to your family's lifestyle while also helping you avoid costly mistakes during the new home construction process.

New Home Design Considerations

A custom-designed new home by Gridley is created specifically for you and the family that will live there. One of our licensed architects will work closely with you to help design a new home that will meet your needs for many years to come. Our team includes a fully degreed design and architect staff that works alongside our specialists to ensure that you get a new home design that is aesthetically pleasing to look at and live in. We help you consider everything you want in a new home design - kitchens, bathrooms, and special needs design and then work with you to prioritize the wish list so that the inevitable hard decisions are well thought out and completed within a planning process that will help you make optimal decisions.

Planning Your New Home Construction Budget

Designing and building a new home is much different than buying an existing resale home and Gridley is here to help you set a realistic construction budget so the project does not get out of hand. Gridley knows that the new home construction process is more complex because you need to decide on each and every piece of the home from door knobs to the kitchen sink. The wrong building partner can forget to mention the hidden costs of building a new home. The Gridley team is different - we are here to partner with you so that you can take advantage of our experience and add transparency and predictability to your new home design construction budget. Our design consultants will help you balance what you want alongside your budget. In many cases, our designers will help you achieve the look or utility you are seeking, even if your first choice is not in your budget range.

Contact us today at (408) 374-0900 to learn more.