
About Us

A Different Kind of Remodeling Firm

The Gridley Company differs in many ways from the typical remodeling firm. We believe, as do our clients, that our distinctiveness makes us better—and our reputation confirms that belief.

A woman-owned business is rare in today's remodeling industry, but the idea was virtually unheard of in 1976, when our founder, Linda Gridley, set out to create a company that would offer homeowners both a better home improvement experience and a great project. Over the years, hundreds and hundreds of homeowners have experienced the Gridley Difference—and with repeat and referral clients constituting about 80% of our business, we think it's working.

Our staff is second to none and works together as a cohesive team to move your project from concept to completion smoothly and with attention to detail. They know your project represents a life change for you, and that your house is not merely a job site, but your home. Our company and staff are committed to delivering the home of your dreams and making that experience as enjoyable, easy and stress-free as possible for you. Environmental Responsibility

In addition to providing our clients with the option of having their projects designed and built using "green" building approaches, the Gridley Company is committed to environmental responsibility. We pay special attention on all projects to energy efficiency; using environmentally responsible building products; recycling and/or disposing properly of construction materials; avoiding using environmentally irresponsible building materials; and even the mileage of our trucks and other vehicles.
